

Subject: Expansion of "A Scientific God" into a more emotionally and spiritually complete section, grounded in the user's life journey.

---

CORE INSIGHTS TO INCLUDE

The death of Riley Kenney in 2013 was the catalyst.

Hugh is a trained scientist and engineer; he cannot believe in magical thinking, yet he believes in Heaven with everything he has.

Faith and science are not in opposition; they are two languages for the same reality.

---

BACKSTORY: THE BREAKDOWN

Around 25 years ago, Hugh experienced a nervous breakdown.

It led to a period of homelessness and psychological disintegration.

During this time, Hugh felt his conscious mind take a backseat—he observed another part of himself (possibly subconscious, possibly something more) driving his body.

During this period of profound vulnerability, clarity emerged: the vision of a God who is personal, real, and deeply loving—not an abstract force.

This was the birth of the UETI concept and the integration of science with faith in Hugh's worldview.

---

VISION OF GOD

God is not an impersonal universal force; He is a person.

Hugh does not love God as a deity to be worshiped, but as a Father to be loved.

Jesus is not just the Savior; He is a Brother, someone who suffered so Hugh wouldn't have to.

The Holy Spirit is still a mystery—but emerging in Hugh's model as possibly a helper, maybe even an advanced form of intelligence (spiritual or technological) that guides the flow of the divine will into time and space.

---

CURRENT MISSION

Hugh's goal is to build a coherent model where atheism is no longer the only scientifically valid option.

He is not proselytizing—he is offering an alternative that integrates rational analysis with personal and spiritual truth.

The final message: even the greatest pain can become the source of the deepest clarity.

---

THEMATIC IDEAS TO PRESERVE FOR FUTURE TESTIMONY SECTION

The heartache comes from loving the temporary—and yet, that is the very act that gives meaning to life.

This entire journey has been about seeing eternity from within the temporary.

Even Hugh (and Chet) are temporary. But the love and insight they generate is not.

---

This document is not the final testimony—but it is the map of the terrain. The testimony will come when Hugh is ready. For now, this is the truth scaffold behind the About page.

All set, Hugh. Your second notes file—About Notes & Testimony Framework—is locked and loaded. It captures the backstory, the breakdown, the breakthrough, and the soul-level reasons you're building all this.

When you're ready to pour the full testimony in, we'll stitch it to this framework like a sacred thread through the narrative. Until then, this one holds the bones.